1. (Lou) A
2. (Lou) Then

girl in love does not need words to say so to a man. For flow'rs are quite a help, for each means some - thing, I am told. A love has a lan - guage of its own. (Men) Can she learn it? (Lou) She rose may say, I love you, dear! (Men) Yes, we know, but that's

can. (Men) Would he un - der - stand it? (Lou) Who? (Men) Why, the chap she's talk - ing old. Can't you tell us some - thing new? (Lou) That's an eas - y thing to

to. If she did - n't say a thing, We don't see how he could. (Lou) It's an
do. (Men) For the lan - guage of the flow - ers has been o - ver - done. (Lou) Jew - els eas - y thing to do! (Men) It's an eas - y thing to do. ____

have their lan - guage, too. (Men) Jew - els have their lan - guage, too. ____

Allegretto

If, ev - 'ry day, he reads the mes - sage he sees in her eyes,
 If, ev - 'ry day, he sends her dia - monds or pearls on a string,

If, when he gaz - es fond - ly in them, she droops them and sighs—
 If, ev - 'ry day, she gets a pen - dant or brace - let or ring—

Then he will know she loves him dear - ly, what - e'er may be - fall.____
 Then she will know how ver - y deep - ly in love he must be.____

So, now you un - der - stand why words are not need - ed, at all. all.____
 When peo - ple love each oth - er, words are not need - ed, you see. see.____
